2020.Barriers to the implementation of oral health programs: a health care system perspective. Primary health care is the key element in the battle to prevent and control diseases and in reducing the health-related costs of Canadian society. When establishing an oral health program within primary health care, a key consideration should be whether the program is realistic and achievable. In view of the significant link between oral health and overall health status, it is critical that oral health programs be structured so as to: (1) fully integrate oral health assessment and treatment into primary health care settings; and (2) integrate the patient's health status into the management of the patient. The author discusses the barriers to oral health programs being implemented within the primary health care system with respect to the individual, system-level and community-level factors that stand in the
