This study is designed to update the incidence and causes of hepatic necrosis (HN), analyze its complications and define the best treatment. This is a retrospective study of fifty cases of hepatic necrosis, collected in the liver transplantation unit from January 2000 to December 2004. The average age of the patients was 47 years and there were 29 females and 21 males. Fibrinous necrosis was found in 29 cases (58%) and accidental in 21 cases (42%). Envenomations by insects were the main cause in the tropical environment: there was only one case of rabies in a patient bitten by a bat and one of snake bites by viperidae family. There were eleven cases of accidental poisoning by various drugs. Gram-negative bacteria were identified in all cases of fibrinous necrosis (Infectious endophthalmitis was associated in one case) and in only one case of it. The necrosis cured in 32 patients (96%).
